Create the following new line:

Project - Pilot on setting up European cohort in the framework of Clinical Research

REMARKS: (delete options not used)

Add the following:

The European Clinical Research is a major challenge. A dynamic biomedical research is essential not only for the competitiveness of the European Union in the framework of Research and Public Health but also for the European patients, who could be assured of being able to benefit from the best care and the latest techniques and medical products.

By setting up several European cohorts for health research, this pilot-project would provide the European Union epidemiological tools to understand determinants of health and improve medical practice and public health policies. The European Union and the Member States would benefit from an extension of the scope of investigation in some areas of health and new studies in other health fields, such as Alzheimer disease or environmental impact on diseases.

This pilot-project could be based on the Framingham study on cardiovascular diseases, which has followed up health of many patients for several decades and has enabled scientists to gather significant scientific data.

Finally, this pilot-project could be financed by national, European and international public-private partnership.
